➤ Citation of Honour for Distinguished Paper Presentation

Ms. Poonam Dua, the dynamic Principal of DPS NTPC Vidyut Nagar, was honoured with the Citation of Honour for Distinguished Paper Presentation at the 2nd National Conference on Contemporary School Mental Health Initiatives, held at Moolchand Medcity, New Delhi.

Her paper titled “Training Teachers and Stakeholders as Mental Health Gatekeepers” received high appreciation from eminent experts, including Dr. Jitendra Nagpal (MD, DNB), Program Director Expressions India. The distinguished guests commended the relevance, depth, and practical impact of the presentation.

This recognition reaffirms the school’s strong commitment to promoting student wellbeing and fostering a mentally healthy school ecosystem.

The DPS NTPC Vidyut Nagar fraternity feels truly honoured and inspired by this remarkable achievement and extends heartfelt congratulations to Ms. Poonam Dua.

ABSTRACT from the paper.....

The paper, “Training Teachers and Stakeholders as Mental Health Gatekeepers”, highlights the pivotal role of schools in nurturing emotionally resilient and mentally healthy individuals. Mental health is presented not merely as the absence of illness, but as a positive state of being, encompassing self-worth, coping skills, and a constructive approach to life’s challenges. The paper emphasizes that despite increasing awareness, mental health is still widely misunderstood and stigmatized, even among educated communities, where it is often associated only with severe disorders and thus neglected. Positioning schools as ideal platforms, the author argues that teachers and trained student peer moderators can effectively function as mental health gatekeepers. Given the diversity of students in terms of socio-economic background, family structures, languages, and cultures, schools naturally present multiple daily situations that require sensitive handling. With proper training, teachers and peer educators can identify early signs of distress, address issues like bullying, low self-esteem, abuse, and gender bias, and equip students with coping strategies and life skills. The paper presents the case study of the “Sparsh Club”, initiated in 2010, which focused on areas such as self-esteem, gender sensitivity, good touch–bad touch, resilience, empathy, and bullying. Over time, a committed team of teachers and adolescent peer educators emerged as the backbone of the initiative, successfully reaching younger students and even preventing severe outcomes such as substance abuse and suicide attempts. Further, initiatives like the “Gratitude Diary”, “Rejuvan8 Club”, “Joy of Sharing Club” a dedicated Meditation Room offering nature sounds, colour therapy, and breathing exercises, along with community outreach to underprivileged villages, are showcased as practical models. These interventions collectively foster empathy, gratitude, and emotional balance. The paper concludes that when teachers and stakeholders consciously accept their role as shapers of personality and emotional well-being, they not only act as mental health gatekeepers but I help build a holistic school ecosystem where every child is empowered with essential life skills for a happy, healthy, and constructive life. Teachers must truly enjoy their profession to act as effective mental health gatekeepers. Beyond teaching content, they must understand students’ emotions, maintain a positive mind-set, and nurture each child’s unique strengths. When teachers follow this philosophy, schools become emotionally stable, happy, and progressive, producing socially and emotionally healthy individuals.
